First person adventure with the emphasis on exploration. Non-linear set of choices that will determine your story, and perhaps, your fate. Love triangle which puts you in the middle of a political and corporate struggle. Fusing of a typical JRPG with a modern, sometimes, cynical outlook on life. Huge main and side quests with interesting mechanics that keep you on your toes. Detail oriented events, conversations, and secrets. Fast paced battles with fully animated attacks A lot of humor Basic skills of course A lot of game mechanics but not a lot of gameplay Blood, Gore, Violence REVIEW is a classic JRPG set in a fictional, modern setting where the player explores the life of a socially awkward shut-in named Bryce Han, who is pushed into (for him Herculean) tasks by his therapist and friend of his late father, Dr. Abe Eisner. Through the intensive four day therapy, the player will tackle tasks such as: going to the store, making new friends, finding a part time job and many more. But, even such menial tasks can hold may dangers of a big city for one not used to its streets. Scammers, beggars and delinquents lurk around every corner waiting for unsuspecting targets. Make friends and enemies in this twisted modern day RPG where every day activities seem like a grueling tasks for the player to deal with. Be careful what you do or say for every choice will have some consequences in the future, for the past choices cannot be rewritten! The gameplay of Introvert Quest will feature mostly dialogue based adventuring, concentrated on a multiple choice system. Choices will impact future events and interaction with other characters inhabiting Sky City. Introvert Quest also features JRPG style battles, but not as a main focus (mostly optional, plus an entire optional mini game aspect: Digital Duels a game that a lot of people play). Battles will be turn based with highly animated attacks. And lastly, but most importantly, after finishing the game successfully, the player will be thrust into a new, completely different experience. FEATURES Branching storyline Multiple choices that impact the story Action packed turn based battles Big city to explore which unlocks as the hero gains more and more confidence

Some of you might already know the game Scrabble Duel (from Gog.com), and that's pretty close to what Sidewalk Games (Sidewalk Labs) is aiming for with Duel in the District. The game starts with both players picking a house in the same neighborhood. It's up to you which neighborhood you want to play in, and where you want to start your game.Once your game starts, it will be a game of "turn-taking" wherein each player plays a game of Scrabble using the letter tiles in their home's neighborhood. The goal is to be the first person to reach the prescribed target number of points. The first player to reach 6 points wins. The game then continues on to the next neighborhood. Character picksEach player starts with a deck of 25 tiles from a full set of letters and can be any word that's on the tiles (misspelled words, common words, and even whole phrases are fair game), though will have to avoid playing dictionary words. Characters can also have some special abilities as you can see on the wikipedia.Once the game starts, players can "draw" any tile from their home's neighborhood for the next turn and the available tiles are then shuffled into their opponent's deck. So, if the first turn you played was an X tile, you could chosen an X tile in the next turn. When one player finishes playing, their tiles are discarded from the game and the next player begins the game.The game ends when a player wins the game by playing one of the five progressive target numbers. To win, a player must play in the target number of tiles.

in Ohio. Local authorities were notified of the high probability of human decompression sickness occurring due to the loss of an electric pump used to operate oil through a subterranean aquifer. The unit's pilot reported it had lost 300 feet before the pump stopped. Simultaneously, a previous aquifer video inspection conducted did not yield significant evidence, therefore the new evidence was valuable in aiding in accident recovery, and aquifer investigation. The Ohio Institute for Stress in Noise (I.I.N.) Unit responded to the call and conducted a visual and acoustic assessment of the well area in reference to the removal of accumulated bubbles. The evidence gathered indicated the unit was in very good condition, the equipment was in place, and the well environment was configured to avoid or minimize human exposure to the potential release of the bubbles. The human waste water system was found to be functioning and the chalk line was in place preventing the accidental release of any decompression bubbles. Click below to view video(s) and photos... Syracuse Crunch head coach Lance Bouma (rear) jokes with goaltender Kristers Gudlevskis at home to begin the Crunch's second quarterfinal game in the 2014 Calder Cup Playoffs against the Elmira Jackals Saturday, May 9, 2014 at the War Memorial Arena at War Memorial in Syracuse, NY. (Bill O'Leary | The Post-Standard) Syracuse Crunch goalie Kristers Gudlevskis (33) congratulates his teammates after they won the AHL Eastern Conference playoff first round best-of-5 showdown with the Rochester Americans at the War Memorial Arena in Syracuse. (Bill O'Leary | The Post-Standard) By J.D. Pendolina In the middle of the fifth period, the Rochester Americans finally took the lead. The Suceremmen were up 4-2 and were pushing the pace. The Crunch had to respond. They did just that by sending 21 shots at the Amerks net in the final frame. That tying goal came after Icemen defenseman Kenny McAuley forced a turnover in Amerks zone and then the puck struck the backboard where it settled for Alex Chiasson. He buried the puck past Rampage netminder Troy Grosenick to tie the game. The Amerks wouldn't be the same team again. Read on after the jump for more photos from the game, including the post-game press conference. Photo: Bill O'Leary | The Post-Standard

ve a feedback » Q: Double-precision floating point maximum range values? How can I find out the maximum range values for double-precision floating point values within C? A: Right now, the IEEE ndard 754 specifies that the smallest and greatest representable values are ±1.11022×10-38 and ±7.45058×10+38, respectively. (See sections A.1 and A.3 in the standard for details.) This means for any given floating-point representation, it would be hard to estimate a maximum range value. However, you might be able to get a rough approximation. If your platform uses the x87 ructions, and if the data is in the fpu_x87_control register (p1.4-5), you can (on x86) determine the exponent range using the exponent_high and exponent_low members of the extended x87 status d (bits 62:61). The low bit in the status word of the p1.4-5 register is a clear indicator whether the exponent is large (i.e., −1000 ... +1000) or small (i.e., −32767 ... +32767). If the low bit is clear, n you know the exponent range used was +ve or −ve powers of 2. Otherwise, you can't know for sure the largest or smallest possible exponent. A little more explanation of these bitmasking rations (from the C99 Standard) follows. p1.4-5 Exponent Range Bits (p1.4-5) Exponent bits 61:63 of the extended status word are initially zero. Bits 61:63 of the result indicated in a branch ruction are set to the value of the top two bits of the extended status word, which may or may not include zero. Bits 62:63
